

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and apparatus for monitoring vehicle violations at a railroad crossing, the method comprising the steps of providing a video camera at the crossing, using a processor to monitor information from the railroad crossing to determine when a traffic violation has likely occurred and when a violation has likely occurred, presenting video of the violation occurring to a system operator via a display screen, providing an input interface for the operator to confirm that a violation has occurred and when the operator confirms that a violation has occurred via the interface, at least one of generating a citation and storing a video clip of the violation for subsequent use.